Hong Kong Children's Hospital

Hong Kong

Kai-ning Cheong is a specialist in Paediatric Immunology, Infectious Diseases and Allergy, with training in Paediatric Rheumatology. She currently works as Associate Consultant at Hong Kong Children's Hospital, where she has since 2019 led and co-ordinated a multidisciplinary team delivering a novel, integrated and holistic healthcare service model for paediatric Rheumatology and Immunology patients. She is an Honorary Clinical Assistant Professor in Paediatric and Adolescent medicine at the University of Hong Kong.

Dr. Cheong is passionate about overcoming the challenges to achieving universal equitable healthcare access. She developed a paediatric field hospital with humanitarian organization Médecins Sans Frontières (Doctors without Borders) in South Sudan during the civil war; received the Bill Marshall Memorial Fund Fellowship (2017) to work in gene therapy for primary immunodeficiencies at Great Ormond Street Children's Hospital (UK); and received the inaugural 2020 D.H. Chen Clinical Research Fellowship for further research in deep immunophenotyping and genotyping of complex immunodysregulatory disorders. She was jointly awarded the NAM-HKU Fellow in Global Health Leadership (2020-2022) by the National Academy of Medicine (USA) and the University of Hong Kong.
